

Active Threat

"Training for Civilians - Almost half of all active shooter events are over before police are on scene and the five highest casualty events since 2000 happened despite police arriving on scene in about 3 minutes. Thus, active shooter awareness training for civilians resident in the potential target venue could be a key element in saving lives." - Los Angeles Airport Shooting Report

The statement above highlights one of the most significant challenges present in Active Threat Incidents (e.g., shootings, stabbings, bombings, etc.). Often times, these incidents are over before law enforcement has a chance to intervene, leaving civilians on their own to make life and death decisions. The Active Threat course is designed to give those in the threat area the best chance of survival by improving mindset, mitigation, preparedness and response.

Active Threat is a course that will provide individuals or organizations, the knowledge, skills, abilities, and attitude to respond to an active threat.
